

ABSTRACT

A packaged medicinal product comprising a medicinal preparation packaged in a plastic container having a fluorinated barrier layer on a surface of its body wall is disclosed. The fluorinated barrier layer on the surface of container body wall reduces 5 the loss of an ingredient in the medicinal preparation through the container body wall, and reduces the transfer of impurities into the medicinal preparation from the container materials, from label-related materials, or from the environment where the packaged medicinal preparation is stored.